MITZVAH TIPS

Making it Enjoyable: We're courteous and gentle, respectful of the temple service, knowledgeable of the prayers and traditions. What's more, you don't have to be pushed and pulled around all day. In fact, you won't even notice that we're there! We want you to feel comfortable to enjoy the day without having to worry about your videographers. So, relax; we bring a long history of expertise and creativity to your event.

All video is not created equal. Even if it means stretching a bit, you want to be thrilled every time you watch your video, not sorry. Look to the future and think about your video as a lifetime investment that acquires more personal value with the passage of time, and invest accordingly in the quality of video that you'd like to be watching for the rest of your lives.

Your decision to invest in a quality video: is not a decision made just for yourselves, it's an investment in the generation yet to come, and guardian of the memory of those that will pass on.

If you've gone over budget but thoroughly enjoy your DVD, your money was well spent. If you save a few hundred dollars and regret your choice, your money was wasted. You'll either never watch the video, or regret your decision every time you do. Good value is not about spending as little as you can, it's about feeling good about what you spent.

From the first moment the camera is turned on, the footage of your event has to be shot well or the editor isn't going to have much to work with. Good quality video implies knowledge of lighting, exposure, audio, positioning, directing and focus, not to mention an artist's eye behind the lens, a highly skilled editor and investment in sophisticated equipment. That's why a quality video costs more money.
